0.1 Topological distinguishability

If two points have the same neighbourhoods then they are topologically indistinguishable.

For example in the trivial topology, all points are topologically indistinguishable.